JOINT MASTERS OF COMPARATIVE HEALTH LAW

First masters in comparative health law authorised by King's College London, the University of Neuchâtel and the University of Paris Descartes. This bilingual programme provides an overview of health law and public health systems, focusing on their international and comparative aspects.

Unique mobile European education

The two year educational programme will train lawyers to work effectively in a context of increased international cooperation.

It will enable students to enter legal professions relating to health law, at national, European and international level.

Its geographical mobility will also open up new perspectives.

One diploma; three university locations

Pooling their academic resources to ensure high quality education, the programme is backed by specialised health law research centres:

- Centre of Medical Law and Ethics, King's College London, recognised in 2014 as the best law faculty in England (directors Penney Lewis & Rosamund Scott)
- Institute of Health Law, University of Neuchâtel, a centre of excellence, and leader in the field within the Swiss academic world (directors Olivier Guillod & Dominique Sprumont)
- Institute of Law and Health, University of Paris Descartes, the first and only specialist French legal centre recognised by Inserm (directors Anne Laude & Didier Tabuteau)
